REDSKINS REDUX: Clinton Portis does a cartwheel to celebrate one of the three touchdowns he scored during the Redskins' 52-17 rout of the San Francisco 49ers on Sunday. The win not only snapped a two-game losing streak, but showcased an offense that had its best scoring day since 1991, during the halcyon days of the first Gibbs administration. It was a personal win for Portis, who had been scoreless this season. ♦ Mind games: Redskins unload their baggage | Page 15

PARKING FINES | Time Expired A Melbourne, Australia, traffic warden slapped a parking ticket Tuesday on a car with a dead driver slumped at the wheel, an official said. The body of the man, reported missing nine days earlier, was discovered Thursday in a parking lot — days after a parking officer had inspected the vehicle, failed to notice the man inside and issued the parking fine. The parking officer said he was "distressed" to learn that the dead man had been inside the car. (AP) EyeOpeners | Page 2

Hurricane Charges At Florida

Officials urge evacuations as storm rockets toward U.S.

KEY WEST, FLA. | Hurricane Wilma accelerated toward storm-weary Florida on Sunday, threatening residents with 105-mph winds, tornadoes and a surge of seawater that could flood the Keys and the state's southwest coast.

After crawling slowly through the Caribbean for several days, Wilma pulled away from Mexico's Yucatan peninsula as a Category 2 storm and, forecasters said, began picking up speed "like a rocket" as it headed toward the U.S. mainland. The storm was expected to make landfall around dawn Monday.

The southern half of the state was under a hurricane warning, and an estimated 160,000 residents were told to evacuate, although many in the low-lying Keys island chain decided to stay.

"I cannot emphasize enough to the folks that live in the Florida Keys: A hurricane is coming," Gov. Jeb Bush said. "Perhaps people are saying, 'I'm going to hunker down.' They shouldn't do that. They should evacuate, and there's very little time left to do so."

Only about 20 percent of the Keys' 78,000 residents fled, according to Billy Wagner, senior emergency management director for Monroe County.

"If they don't get out of there, they're going to be in deep trouble," he said. DAVID ROYSE (AP)

EMPTY STANDS

The Cheerleaders Felt a Little Silly

Two football teams competed Friday in front of two dozen police officers and an otherwise empty Mount Vernon, N.Y., stadium — a precaution sparked by the schools' worry that violence might occur. There has been tension between the two communities recently, superintendant Brenda Smith said, although there was no specific threat involving the game. Still, Mount Vernon and New Rochelle school officials rescheduled the Saturday game and banned fans, although most were in class anyway. Police officers at the main gate permitted only reporters and school officials to enter the stadium. (AP)

Maybe the Vending Machine Had Resisted

Being fired was too harsh for a Harlington, Texas, police officer who stole two 50-cent bags of snack chips by shaking a vending machine, civil service commissioners said Wednesday. The commission overruled a decision to fire officer Randy Reyna, recommending he instead be suspended for 90 days. A police videotape shows Reyna lifting and shaking the machine. (AP)

Miers May Not Have Enough Votes

Senator says hearings will 'make or break' nominee's chances

WASHINGTON | Harriet Miers does not have the votes now in the GOP-controlled Senate to be confirmed for the Supreme Court and confirmation hearings "will be make or break ... in a way they haven't been for any other nominee," a leading Democratic senator said Sunday.

While Democrats pressed the White House to provide documents from Miers' work as the president's counsel, Republicans said the nomination that has riled conservatives is not in danger.

Sen. Charles Schumer, a member of the committee that plans confirmation hearings beginning Nov. 7, said lawmakers from both parties are concerned about Miers' qualifications, independence and judicial philosophy.

"I think, if you were to hold

the vote today, she would not get a majority, either in the Judiciary Committee or on the floor," said Schumer, D-N.Y.

But the committee chairman rejected the notion that Miers' nomination was shaky. Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said most senators are waiting for the hearings before making up their minds. "There are no votes one way or another," he said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Another committee Republican, Sen. Sam Brownback of Kansas, said he has not seen "anything coming from the White House that says that they're going to pull this nomination.

Brownback, who has been skeptical of Miers and has not announced how he will vote, added, "They're doing everything they can to prepare Harriet Miers for the hearings right now."

Miers, a longtime Bush confidante who has never been a judge, was nominated to replace retiring Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

Sen. George Allen said any indicted White House aide should step down.

Aides Face Pressure in Leak Case

WASHINGTON | As possible indictments from a special prosecutor could come this week, Virginia Republican Sen. George Allen said Sunday that it would be appropriate for any White House aide to step aside if indicted in the CIA leak investigation.

The grand jury that has investigated the disclosure of CIA officer Valerie Plame's identity is set to expire on Friday.

Top presidential political adviser Karl Rove and Vice President Cheney's chief of staff, I. Lewis "Scooter" Libby, have emerged as central figures in the probe because they had contacts with reporters who learned Plame's identity or disclosed it in news stories.

"I think they should step down ... if they're in the midst of an indictment," Allen said. (AP)

Times, Reporter Wage Public Battle

NEW YORK | The New York Times' ombudsman said the newspaper should review reporter Judith Miller's journalism practices to address "clear issues of trust and credibility" in her role in the CIA leak investigation. Miller's attorney called the newspaper's recent criticism of her "shameless."

Times Public Editor Byron Calame also said the paper should consider updating its ethics guidelines on using anonymous sources and quoted publisher Arthur Sulzberger Jr. as saying "there are new limits" on what Miller can do in the future.

Calame wrote in a Sunday column that the Times and Miller's

Miller

Oct. 16 accounts of the reporting that landed Miller in jail for refusing to testify to a grand jury "suggested that the journalistic practices of Ms. Miller and Times editors were more flawed than I feared."

Miller went to jail for 85 days rather than testify to a grand jury investigating the leaking of a covert CIA officer's identity. (AP)

BODY COUNT: As of Sunday, at least 1,996 members of the U.S. military have died since the beginning of the Iraq war in March 2003, according to an Associated Press count. At least 1,547 died as a result of hostile action, according to the military's numbers. The figures include five military civilians. The AP count is 13 higher than the Pentagon's official tally. Yale University's anthropology department recently voted behind closed doors to not renew the contract of a famed anarchist professor who has been critical of the university's efforts to kick out a student who tried to unionize graduate students. Snake Bite at School Leaves Girl in Serious Condition

A 14-year-old girl may lose her arm after being bitten by a venomous copperhead snake at school on Friday, authorities said. The snake was caught in Valley Forge by a 17-year-old male student who took it in a shoebox to a drama club gathering at St. Pius X High School. The boy was showing the reptile to other students when it bit the girl's finger. Police say that the girl, who has been in very serious condition, could lose her arm. (AP)

Rate of Women In Prison Climbs

Upswing linked to more participation in drug, violent crimes

WASHINGTON | Women made up 7 percent of all inmates in state and federal prisons last year and accounted for nearly one in four arrests, the government reported Sunday.

A co-author of a Bureau of Justice Statistics report, Paige Harrison, linked an upswing in the rate of arrest for women to their increased participation in fraud and drug and violent crimes.

The number of women incarcerated in state and federal prisons in 2004 was up 4 percent compared to 2003, nearly double the 1.8 percent increase among men, the study said.

In 1995, women made up 6.1 percent of all inmates in those facilities.

"The number of incarcerated women has been growing at a rate nearly double that of men, due in large part to sentencing policies in the war in drugs," according to a statement from The Sentencing Project, a group promoting alternatives to prison.

The group said the number of drug offenders in prisons and jails has risen from 40,000 in 1980 to more than 450,000 today. (AP)

Average Price of Gas Falls 25 Cents

CAMARILLO, CALIF. | Retail gas prices across the nation fell an average of 25 cents in the past two weeks as refineries in the Gulf Coast steadily resumed production, according to a survey released Sunday.

Still, prices remained slightly higher than pre-Hurricane Katrina levels.

The weighted average price for all three grades declined to $2.69 a gallon on Oct. 21, according to the Lundberg Survey of 7,000 gas stations nationwide. (AP)

Distrust in New Orleans

Difficult past, bungled relief effort fuel blacks' worries as city rebuilds

Darryl Delatte, 57 years old and 22 months shy of retiring as a mechanic, was rescued from his flooded New Orleans home after Hurricane Katrina and dropped on an interstate. There, he watched people die — and wondered why no help came.

"Everybody kept passing you by," he says.

Now, at a cavernous disaster relief center in Houston, he ponders the promises made by government officials — of land and jobs for evacuees back home, of a rebirth of the city's essential, vibrant black community.

He has doubts, real and hardened.

It is not difficult to find other black New Orleanians who share those doubts — forged in an era of slavery, cemented by floods and hurricanes past and decades of political and social disappointment. And those doubts have profound implications for the very much uncertain prospect of rebuilding New Orleans.

Even today, poorer New Orleans blacks hold deep resentment for Mayor Ray Nagin, himself an

A woman and her child wait to be moved from the convention center in New Orleans on Sept. 1. The botched relief effort stranded thousands, mostly African-Americans.

African-American, seen by many as favoring elite business owners — and as likely to favor them again in the rebuilding, said Mike Davis, a San Diego historian and writer who spent a week in New Orleans in September.

Delatte figures the racial dynamics of the city will change drastically after a rebuilding led by Nagin.

"It's going to be a whiter city. It's 70 percent black and it's going to change, probably flip over to 70 percent white," he said.

So what can be done to restore trust damaged so deeply?

"People we talked to down there said jobs, jobs, jobs," Davis said. Davis also said a full-fledged government inquiry into the disaster might help restore trust. But such an inquiry appears to be far down the road, if it happens at all. ERIN MCCLAM (AP)

Suspect in Fla. Child's Murder to Face Trial

SARASOTA, FLA. | Jury selection is set to begin Tuesday for the trial of Joseph P. Smith, the man accused of kidnapping, raping and strangling 11-year-old Carlie Brucia on Super Bowl Sunday 2004. The start was delayed a day because of Hurricane Wilma.

A security camera at Evie's Car Wash captured images of the tall, blond sixth-grader being grabbed by the arm and led away by a man at dusk on Feb. 1, 2004. She was found dead four days later.

Smith, 39, is charged with first-degree murder, kidnapping and capital sexual battery. Prosecutors say they will seek the death penalty.

Study Shows Upswing in U.S. Charitable Giving

NEW YORK | Americans gave more money to charity in 2004 than the year before, and it looks like that generosity is still growing.

The 400 largest U.S. charities saw donations rise 11.6 percent last year from 2003, according to the Chronicle of Philanthropy, a newspaper that tracks charitable organizations. The United Way of America was the top fund-raising group in 2004, the Chronicle said.

The publication's Philanthropy 400 list, released Monday, ranks the nation's biggest nonprofit groups by private donations. Money given to the top 400 organizations accounted for more than a quarter of the $248.5 billion raised in the U.S. last year, the Chronicle said. (AP)

Campaign to Ban Hamas Candidates From Poll Ends

Israel has dropped its campaign to ban the violent Islamic Hamas from Palestinian parliamentary elections, a senior official said Sunday, admitting defeat after President Bush skipped repeating the demand in an appearance with the Palestinian leader last week. Israel never made specific threats in connection with Hamas candidates, but hinted it would refuse to remove roadblocks and ease other travel restrictions vital to carrying out a free elections campaign. UNDER WATER: Hurricane Wilma's winds and torrential rains left many downtown streets in Cancun, Mexico, flooded Sunday.

Wilma Rips Mexican Coast

Looting breaks out in storm's chaotic aftermath

CANCUN, MEXICO | Mexicans and stranded tourists, hungry and frustrated after a two-day beating by Hurricane Wilma, stood in line to buy supplies Sunday or simply raided grocery or furniture stores, dragging goods from shops ripped open by the storm.

The hurricane's steady march toward southern Florida meant an end here to two days of howling winds and torrential rains that shattered windows, peeled away roofing and sent the ocean crashing into hotel lobbies. The sun emerged over Mexico's sugar-white Caribbean beaches.

But another kind of chaos took over, as police shot into the air to scare looters away from a shopping center, and looters responded by throwing rocks and chunks of concrete.

Downtown, officials feared looters would turn on tourists, so they quickly evacuated more than 30 foreigners from a downtown area overrun by people raiding stores.

Military officials and police stood guard outside businesses and set up checkpoints to seize stolen goods.

"It's chaos," said fire official Gregorio Vergara. "They are taking things all over the city."

Meanwhile, military aid convoys rolled into the resort town, handing out bottled water and medical aid.

The storm knocked out many of the island's docks, making it difficult for navy ships to arrive. State officials were trying to clear airstrips on Cozumel and nearby Isla Mujeres so that planes could land with aid. WILL WEISSERT (AP)

800,000 Quake Victims Homeless

RAWALPINDI, PAKISTAN | The United Nations warned that 800,000 people remain without shelter more than two weeks after South Asia's colossal quake, and renewed its urgent call for help before the winter closes in.

An aftershock on Sunday — one of hundreds since the initial temblor — killed five people in Afghanistan's eastern Zabul province, though no further casualties were reported in Kashmir. A 6.0-magnitude quake later struck Pakistan's quake region, but there were no reports of deaths or injuries. (AP)

No Survivors in Nigerian Plane Crash

LAGOS, NIGERIA | Twisted chunks of metal, ripped luggage and mangled bodies turned a swath of woods into a grisly scene after a Nigerian passenger plane carrying 117 people crashed shortly after takeoff and officials said Sunday that all aboard were feared dead.

Red Cross and government officials said search teams found no sign that anyone on the Boeing 737 survived when it plunged to earth Saturday night after leaving Lagos, the biggest city in Nigeria.

Parrot Dies Of Bird Flu In England

Animal likely picked up deadly virus while housed in quarantine

LONDON | The British government said Sunday that a strain of bird flu that killed a parrot in quarantine is the deadly H5N1 strain that has plagued Asia.

Scientists determined that the parrot, imported from South America, died of the strain of avian flu that has devastated poultry stocks and killed 61 people in Asia the past two years, according to the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs.

The virus is spread by migrating wild birds and has recently been found in birds in Russia, Turkey and Romania.

Debby Reynolds, DEFRA's chief veterinarian, said the parrot was likely infected with the virus while it was housed in a quarantine system with birds from Taiwan.

Elsewhere, the Croatian government on Sunday promised to compensate farmers whose birds were slaughtered to prevent the spread of bird flu. About 10,000 birds have been killed in an area near where six swans were found to have been infected with the virus. (AP)

4 Killed in Baghdad Blast

Burst of fresh violence in Iraq comes as U.S. death toll nears 2,000

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | An insurgent blew up his car in a Baghdad square Sunday, killing four people in the first significant suicide bombing in the capital in weeks. More than 20 Iraqis died in a swell of violence, including a bomb that killed a police colonel and four children.

Still, with the toll among American service members in the Iraq war approaching 2,000 dead, the U.S. military said it has hampered insurgents' ability to unleash more devastating suicide bombings with a series of offensives in western towns.

In Sunday's attack, the bomber plowed his explosives-laden car into two police vehicles in downtown Tahrir Square at 11:30 a.m., killing two police officers and two civilians. U.S. troops rushing to the scene in Humvees found bystanders tending to 11 wounded.

suicide attack in the capital since a Sept. 26 attack killed seven people near the Oil Ministry.

The violence came after a week in which 23 U.S. soldiers were reported killed, raising to 1,996 the number of military personnel who have died since the war began in March 2003, according to an Associated Press count.

A suicide car bomber rammed into a U.S. military convoy Sunday morning in Kirkuk, killing two civilians and wounding 13.

Attacks also flared in north-central Iraq. The slaying of the police colonel and his children came in Tikrit. LEE KEATH (AP)

Benedict Names First New Saints

VATICAN CITY | Pope Benedict XVI named five new saints Sunday at a Mass closing a three-week meeting of the world's Roman Catholic bishops that reaffirmed the church's position on celibacy for priests and other central teachings.

Most of the 250 bishops who attended the Synod of Bishops joined the pope in celebrating the Mass and sainthood ceremony.

"Today I have the joy of presiding for the first time over a canonization rite," Benedict said. Many of the thousands of people gathered in St. Peter's Square waved Chilean flags in honor of a Chilean Jesuit who was being canonized.

Benedict also highlighted some of the major issues that emerged during the synod, calling priestly celibacy a "precious gift" and telling lay Catholics there can be no "dichotomy" between their faith and everyday life.

Benedict's predecessor, Pope John Paul II, canonized 482 people and beatified 1,338 — more than all the previous popes over the past 500 years combined. (AP)

Initial Poll Results Show Brazilians Rejecting Gun Ban

RIO DE JANEIRO, BRAZIL | Brazilians were soundly rejecting a proposal to ban gun sales in a national referendum Sunday following a fiercely contested campaign, according to initial results.

With results from 71 percent of the polling places tallied, 65 percent of Brazilians were against the ban, while 35 percent were in favor of the proposal aimed at stemming one of the world's highest murder rates.

Brazil has 100 million fewer citizens than the U.S., but a staggering 25 percent more gun deaths at 40,000 a year. While both sides in the debate agree that violence is excessive, opponents of the gun ban have gained support in recent weeks by playing on Brazilians' fears that the police can't protect them.

More than 120 million Brazilians were expected to cast ballots. (AP)

MARKET VALUE: India's main opposition party on Sunday blamed the government and traders for an onion shortage, claiming they hoped to force prices higher during upcoming Hindu festivals. Debate Renewed Over Lenin Burial

Putin may favor plan to bury body of U.S.S.R.'s first leader

MOSCOW | For more than six decades, glorious military parades and throngs of solemn Soviet citizens passed by the Red Square mausoleum where Vladimir Lenin's mummified corpse lies under glass. Then history passed him by.

Now, nearing the 15th anniversary of the death of the Soviet Union, a debate is brewing about whether it's time to bury the body of the man who tried to bury capitalism.

The debate isn't new. What's different this time are the intriguing hints that President Vladimir Putin is agreeable to a burial. He's often accused of taking Russia back to old Soviet ways, and removing the father of the Soviet Union from public display could be a way of deflecting the criticism.

This fall the debate went public when Georgy Poltavchenko, a prominent aide to Putin, unexpectedly told a news conference: "Our country has been shaken by strife, but only few were held accountable for that in their lifetime. I don't think it's fair that those who initiated that strife remain in the center of our state near the Kremlin."

Poltavchenko said his opinion was strictly personal. But Kremlin officials rarely sound off to no purpose. His comments were seen as a way of testing public reaction to the idea.

The Communist Party, still popular among Russia's poor and elderly, was outraged.

"It defies the nation's history and common sense," party leader Gennady Zyuganov said.

Even Lenin's ideological enemies have demurred on the issue.

"This matter shouldn't be stirred up," Dmitry Mitrokhin of the liberal Yabloko party told the newspaper Gazeta. "Even if he is buried with all honors ... all the same it will be provocative." JIM HEINTZ (AP)

U.S., Britain Keep Heat on Syria Over U.N. Report

BEIRUT, LEBANON | The U.S. and Britain called Sunday for an international stand against Syria in the wake of a U.N. report that implicated Syrian officials in the assassination of a former Lebanese leader.

A Syrian official, deputy Foreign Minister Walid Moallem, said the pressure on Syria was because of America's aim of dominating the region. He denied that he had threatened Rafik Hariri days before he was assassinated as the U.N. report said.

The U.S.-British call for action, in a joint BBC interview by Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and British Foreign Secretary Jack Straw, underlined the pressure on Syria as it faces possible action by the U.N. Security Council. (AP)

Fairfax County police are investigating whether a man who assaulted a 26-year-old woman Sunday morning in her Dunn Loring area home is also responsible for two more sexual assaults from recent weeks near the Dunn Loring Metrorail station. Police say that Sunday's victim woke up around 4:15 a.m. to find a man in the bedroom of her home near Gallows Road. The man fled after the victim, who received minor injuries, fought him off. (AP)

As part of the settlement, which followed an investigation by the state of Maryland's Commission on Human Relations, the owner of the education supplies store, Learning How, also sent an apology to the fired worker, Shabana Ahmed. The owner also agreed to send his managers to cultural and religious awareness training. A Learning How official, however, denied any wrongdoing. (AP)

Poll: Va. Governor's Race Is Close

Results show GOP didn't gain from attack ads

RICHMOND, VA. | Democrat Tim Kaine and Republican Jerry Kilgore remained in a very close race for governor, according to an independent statewide poll published Sunday.

Kilgore, the former state attorney general, was the choice of 44 percent of the likely voters Mason-Dixon Polling & Research Inc. surveyed last week, while 42 percent favored Kaine, the lieutenant governor. Kilgore's lead is within the poll's margin of error of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

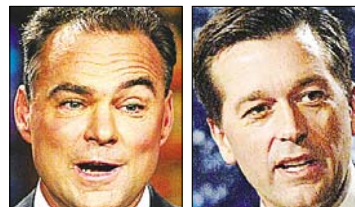

Support for State Sen. H. Russell Potts Jr., a dissident Republican running as an independent, was 5 percent. Nine percent of the 625 voters polled Thursday and Friday were undecided.

The results indicate Kilgore got little or no advantage from television ads that invoked Adolf Hitler in attacking Kaine's death penalty opposition in a GOP-dominated state with a robust legacy of carrying out executions.

"It shows that the death penalty smear attack fell on its face," Kaine spokeswoman Delacey Skinner said.

Kaine, who is Roman Catholic, said he will put his faith-based objections to the death penalty aside if elected and continue Virginia's brisk pace of executions.

Kaine

The 94 executions since the Supreme Court reinstated capital punishment in 1976 ranks second only to Texas.

In Kilgore's ads, murder victims' relatives denounce Kaine, a former criminal defense attorney, for opposing the death penalty. In one ad, victims' rights advocate Stanley Rosenbluth denounces Kaine for handling the death row appeals for his son's killer, who was executed in 1999, and says Kaine feels that not even Hitler deserved the death penalty.

The poll also indicates that Kaine has gained little from the support of Gov. Mark R. Warner, the highly popular centrist Democrat who has been eyeing a presidential run in 2008. Warner, who is barred from a second term by Virginia's constitution, has been campaigning statewide with Kaine and is featured in a Kaine television ad. BOB LEWIS (AP)

N.Y. Rapper Shot During Botched D.C. Carjacking

Cam'ron wounded in apparent attempt to steal Lamborghini

WASHINGTON | New York rapper Cam'ron was shot early Sunday morning during a botched carjacking while driving away from a Southwest waterfront night spot, his manager said.

The artist was stopped at a light when a man shot him in an attempt to steal his Lamborghini, said his manager Big Joe.

"Basically a car pulled up and tried to carjack him," he said.

Big Joe said Cam'ron was driving alone when he was stopped, and had lost track of others who left the club, H2O, in separate vehicles on their way to another club.

Cam'ron was shot by a single bullet that passed through both of his arms, which were extended to hold his steering wheel, when he refused the gunman and attempted to drive away, said a spokeswoman for Cam'ron's label, Diplomat Records.

She said the artist is recovering in good spirits at Howard University Hospital, where he has been joined by fellow Diplomat artists Jim Jones and Juelz Santana.

Hobson said she first heard about the shooting by phone at around 1:20 a.m. on Sunday, and believed it happened between midnight and then. (AP)

Knight Gone Pro

JIM MILLER, 26

JOB: Sir James Gray, knight in the Free Lancers of the Cimmerian Combatives Company

SALARY: Knights in the Tennessee-based Free Lancers are paid $100 to $225 per day for events.

EDUCATION: Associate's degree in arts and sciences from the Community College of Baltimore County

WHAT HE DOES: Miller adds to the 16th-century atmosphere of the Maryland Renaissance Festival by battling fellow knights in jousts and giving demonstrations of combat skills, such as spearing targets while on horseback (at other events, his troupe also performs choreographed sword fighting). For the jousting, which is full-contact and totally unscripted, knights protect themselves with about 100 pounds of stainless-steel armor. Bouts usually involve up to six passes on horseback, with points awarded both for hits and knocking the opponent off his or her horse (the "sweet spot" to hit is near the left armpit, Miller said). "It's a lot to think about" in an instant, he said: Sight is limited to narrow slits in the helmet and you're controlling a charging horse — which, at best, is still an "improvisational actor," all while trying to aim a 10-foot wooden lance (hitting a horse is a "huge disgrace").

WOULD YOU WANT HIS JOB? Stamping toward someone with a giant pole not surprisingly ups the chance of workplace injury. On top of the sprains, dislocations, occasional broken bones and "bruised bodies to no end," there's also the chance of catching a lance to the crotch. "They've come very close, but they haven't actually gotten me," Miller said. During festival months, he adds an extra 35 hours to the work week, including 14-hour Saturdays and Sundays, between practices, preparation and the shows.

HOW YOU CAN GET HIS JOB: Knights in the Free Lancers climb the ranks through extensive training that can take years; Miller became a knight after more than six years of work. Newbies, working as squires or even "squires-in-training," help the knights during the show while learning the rudiments of horseback riding and combat. Joining a troupe can be as simple as introducing yourself at an event and offering to volunteer, Miller said.

The Trauma Of the Thumb

The overstressed digit is the new victim of workplace injuries

WORKPLACE | Chris Claypool was addicted to his BlackBerry wireless handheld. Like many users, he never thought twice about pecking away at lightning speed, replying to a wave of e-mails from clients around the globe.

Last year, the 37-year-old agricultural sales director from Post Falls, Idaho, noticed a throbbing sensation in this thumbs whenever he typed. He switched to tapping with his index finger, then his middle digit and finally his pinky. But his thumbs pained him to the point where he can't even press the buttons on his TV remote control.

After months of aching, Claypool took a break. Now he only uses his BlackBerry to send short messages — typing with the tip of a pencil eraser whenever his thumbs get sore. "It affects business because I can't whack away on my BlackBerry like I used to," he said.

Repetitive motion injuries, which have long afflicted desktop and laptop computer users, are invading the mobile handheld world.

There's even an informal name for the malady — "BlackBerry Thumb" — a catch-all phrase that describes a repetitive stress injury of the thumb as a result of overus-ing small gadget keypads.

No national statistics exist on how many people suffer from this type of thumb ailment, but some doctors say they are seeing an upswing in related cases, said Dr. Stuart Hirsch, an orthopedist at St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center in Paterson, N.J.

"It's mostly the road warrior who prefers to answer e-mails on a thumb keyboard," said Hirsch. "If all you did was just answer with a simple yes and no, it would not be a dilemma."

Earlier this year, the American Society of Hand Therapists issued a consumer alert, warning users of small electronic gadgets that heavy thumb use could lead to painful swelling of the sheath around the tendons in the thumb. The group recommended taking frequent breaks during e-mailing and resting one's arms on a pillow for support.

Specialists say the thumb is among the least dexterous digits and is not meant to be rigorously worked out.

For people who insist on typing more than a sentence with their thumbs, external keyboards that connect to the gadgets may be a less painful alternative, said Dr. Jennifer Weiss, assistant professor of orthopedics at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles.

Agile new Web apps are lightning-fast and highly efficient

ONLINE | A quiet revolution is transforming life on the Internet: New, agile software now lets people quickly check flight options, see stock prices fluctuate and better manage their photos and e-mail.

Such tools make computing less of a chore because they sit on distant Web servers and run over standard browsers. Users thus don't have to worry about installing software or moving data when they switch computers. This could bode ill for Microsoft Corp. and its Office suite of applications.

The threat comes in large part from Ajax, a set of Web development tools that speeds up Web applications by summoning snippets of data as needed instead of pulling entire Web pages over and over. Ironically, Microsoft invented Ajax and has used it for years to power an online version of Outlook.

Ajax's resurgence is thanks partly to its use by Google Inc. Before Google Maps, online maps were static: Click on an arrow, wait a few seconds as the Web page reloads. Now users can drag the map and watch new areas fill in instantly.

Consider e-mail. Until recently, Web mail meant sending forms back and forth online. Check an item to delete and hit a button. A remote mail server receives instructions and responds with an entirely new page.

Enter Yahoo Inc. and an interface it is testing using technology from an Ajax pioneer it bought, Oddpost. Delete an item this time, and Ajax reconfigures the page immediately without waiting for a response. Yahoo also is developing an Ajax tool that instantly updates flight options as travelers narrow their choices of airports, airlines and travel times.

This summer, America Online Inc. started using Ajax to let users rearrange, display and switch photo albums with fewer clicks.

And last week, Dow Jones & Co.'s MarketWatch began embedding news articles with stock quotes updated several times a second.

"A Web page takes longer to load than that," said Jamie Thingelstad, MarketWatch's chief technology officer. "Your computer would just be hung."

Computer-intensive applications like Photoshop and high-end games won't come to browsers anytime soon.

Google had to create a software download, called Google Earth, to permit advanced features. "Ajax cannot do everything," said Bret Taylor, who oversees Google's mapping products. "Web applications have a way to go." ANICK JESDANUN (AP)

Grading Gibbs

The best & worst from the game

➔ BEST CALL: Choosing just one may be impossible, but the pass to Mike Sellers after a forced fumble in the second quarter stands out.

➔ WORST CALL: None.

➔ BEST ADJUSTMENT: Putting LaVar Arrington back on the field. He proved he was a playmaker by leading the team in tackles.

GRADE: A: Talk about flashbacks to the glory days during Gibbs' first tenure. Now they have to keep it up against the Giants and Eagles.

Glory Days Return to Washington

49ers prove to be the cure for all that ails Redskins in 52-17 win

REDSKINS | Clinton Portis did cartwheels. LaVar Arrington was close to tears. Joe Gibbs' paranoia about a possible upset faded quickly.

After five nail-biting games to start the season, the Washington Redskins unloaded their psychological baggage on the hapless San Francisco 49ers. All that had gone wrong went right Sunday in a 52-17 victory over the NFC's worst team.

The Redskins (4-2) led 35-7 at halftime, piled up 448 yards and scored on seven of their first nine possessions to snap a two-game losing streak. Mark Brunell completed 13 of 20 passes for 252 yards and three touchdowns. Mike Sellers caught scoring passes of 2 and 19 yards. Santana Moss had a 32-yard TD reception and maintained his torrid start with five passes for 112 yards, his fourth 100-yard game in five weeks.

Portis ran 19 times for 101 yards and scored his first three touchdowns of the season.

"Sorry, Mark, for wanting to put a fork in you. We apologize for thinking you were done."

There were huge cheers for Arrington, the three-time Pro Bowl linebacker whose benching created as much distraction as a quarterback controversy. Arrington didn't play a down on defense the last two weeks, but assistant coach Gregg Williams rewarded the player's recent improvement in practice by using him mostly in long-yardage situations. Arrington had a team-high seven tackles.

"You see it in my eyes? Red eyes?" said Arrington, whose tear ducts were close to welling up as he stood in front of his locker. "I was trying to get it done, man. I was just happy to be out there with the fellows. That was my biggest thing. It was just painful watching them out there fighting."

The points were the most for the Redskins since a 56-17 win over Atlanta on Nov. 10, 1991. They forced two turnovers, their first since the opening game of the season. They had five sacks — doubling their number for the entire season.

Gibbs this week criticized anyone who suggested his team would have an easy time with the 49ers (1-5). Well, the Redskins did, and Gibbs as a bonus became the third active coach to win 150 games, behind Marty Schottenheimer (185) and Bill Parcells (167). "I hope we didn't use them all up," Gibbs said of his team's 52 points. "Everything kind of went our way today." JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Socks Off for Pettitte in Hometown

Deer Park supports its native son as Houston faces Chicago in series

WORLD SERIES | Around these parts in Deer Park, Texas, there's a new dress code this week. Socks are out. White ones, especially.

And folks in Andy Pettitte's hometown are fine with that.

Pettitte left the New York Yankees to join the Houston Astros before the 2004 season, then moved back to Deer Park — a city of about 30,000 just east of Houston where the pitcher grew up and met his wife of 12 years while they were in high school.

Part of Pettitte's decision to return to Texas from New York was based on a desire to help his local team reach its first World Series. The Astros made it this year, and Pettitte was set to start Game 2 Sunday night against the Chicago White Sox.

"I don't think anything has excited him more than being able to come home and help his team get to the World Series," Pettitte's mother-in-law, Shirley Dunn, said Saturday.

Astros fever and an effort to dispose of all socks quickly took over this petrochemical town where kids

Gary Schoene, 59, who lives next door to Pettitte's parents, proudly displayed his bare feet Saturday.

All of his white socks hang on a yellow clothes line outside his home alongside a sign that reads: "Hanging out the White Sox."

Schoene said he doesn't support socks "in any manner, shape or form" — well, at least until the World Series is over. PAM EASTON (AP)

Longhorns Gain Votes On Trojans

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | Texas is changing some minds.

The second-ranked Longhorns picked up two more first-place votes in The Associated Press Top 25 on Sunday, gaining on No. 1 Southern California.

USC is on top of the rankings for a record 27th straight poll. The Trojans received 55 first-place votes and 1,615 points. The Longhorns, coming off a 52-17 victory over previously unbeaten Texas Tech, received the remaining 10 first-place votes and 1,569 points.

"I didn't move USC down as much as I moved Texas up," said Joe Giglio of The New & Observer of Charlotte, N.C., one of two voters to switch Texas and USC this week.

After a Saturday with no major upsets, the top nine teams held their positions in the Top 25. Virginia Tech is No. 3, followed by Georgia, Alabama, Miami, LSU, UCLA and Notre Dame. Texas Tech was the only top-10 team to fall. The Red Raiders dropped to No. 17 after their first loss of the season. That leaves six unbeaten teams — USC, Texas, Virginia Tech, Georgia, Alabama and UCLA. RALPH D. RUSSO (AP)

Stewart takes lead in the Chase by placing second at Martinsville

Gordon, a four-time champion who didn't qualify for the 10-race, season-ending playoff, completed a sweep of the season's two races on the .526-mile speedway, the oldest, short-

As he did in April, Gordon said he was dedicating the victory to the 10 people killed a year ago when a Hendrick Motorsports plane crashed on the way to the track.

"It's been awhile," Gordon said after his 73rd career victory, fourth this year and first since May 1. "What a great, great feeling."

The runner-up finish was the second in a row for Stewart here. He led 283 of the first 343 laps, then wasn't near as commanding after his last two pit stops. But his dominance did give him 10 bonus points — 5 for leading a lap and 5 for leading the most in the race — to take first place for himself with four races left. HANK KURZ JR. (AP)

Bears Win Battle With The Ravens

RAVENS | In a slugfest of two top defensive teams, the Chicago Bears mustered just enough offense when it counted.

Kyle Orton threw a first-quarter touchdown pass to Marc Edwards and Thomas Jones ran for 83 of his 139 yards in the final period to help the Bears beat the Baltimore Ravens 10-6 on Sunday in a chilly rain.

It was Chicago's first win this season outside the abysmal NFC North and kept the Bears tied for first at 3-3 with Detroit.

The offense-challenged Bears relied mostly on their defense, which entered the game ranked No. 3 in the NFL to Baltimore's No. 2. It was their second straight game without allowing a touchdown, and they remain the league's only team not to have allowed a rushing touchdown this season.

Tank Johnson helped seal the victory with two fourth-quarter sacks of Ravens quarterback Anthony Wright on third-down plays. DAVE CARPENTER (AP)

Steelers Put Bengals in Their Place

Pittsburgh shows why it's still the AFC North champ in 27-13 victory

NFL | Not yet, Bengals.

In front of a record crowd roaring for a changing of the guard, the upstart Bengals got put in their place by the Pittsburgh Steelers, who proved Sunday that they're still the team to beat in the AFC North.

Ben Roethlisberger threw two touchdown passes in his return from a knee injury, and the Steelers used their proven formula — run the ball and play defense — to grind out a 27-13 victory.

"You have to understand that we're the champions until proven

Willie Parker rushed for 131 yards and a touchdown in the Steelers 27-13 victory over the Bengals on Sunday. It was just the Bengals' second loss of the season.

otherwise," said linebacker Joey Porter, part of a defense that made Carson Palmer look ordinary.

The Steelers (4-2) have a knack for winning tough games in tough places. They dominated the second half in front of a Cincinnati-record crowd of 66,104, and Pittsburgh set a franchise record of its own with a 10th straight road victory.

In the end, it was Hines Ward — not Chad Johnson — getting the last dance. He kicked up his heels following a third-quarter touchdown that essentially clinched it.

"They were 5-1, and everybody was on the Cincinnati Bengals bandwagon," Ward said. "For us to come in here and win the way we did, it goes a long way for our organization." JOE KAY (AP)

A PIERCING BLOW: New York Giants linebacker Antonio Pierce tackles Denver Broncos tight end Jeb Putzier in the second quarter Sunday. The Giants came from behind to beat the Broncos 24-23 on a last-second touchdown.

Late Block Lifts Eagles to Victory

NFL | Quintin Mikell blocked a field goal and Matt Ware returned it 65 yards for a touchdown with 2:25 left, leading the Philadelphia Eagles to a 20-17 victory over the San Diego Chargers on Sunday.

San Diego's LaDainian Tomlinson was held to a career-low 7 yards rushing on 17 carries and failed to score, ending his NFL record-tying streak of consecutive games with a touchdown at 18.

Drew Brees rallied the Chargers from a 10-0 deficit with a pair of TD passes, but San Diego couldn't put the game away.

Mikell leaped in the air to swat away Nate Kaeding's 40-yard attempt. Ware picked it up after one bounce and raced into the end zone. (AP)

DOOMY LOOKOUT: The Rock's latest action flick came in with a light pop instead of a bang during another slow weekend. "Doom" debuted as the top movie with a modest $15.4 million, leading a lackluster lineup that continued Hollywood's box-office slump.

A Town Without Pity

The 'South Park' guys are still fearless after all these years

Q&A | "South Park," Matt Stone and Trey Parker's crude cartoon, began its ninth season last Wednesday. It's Comedy Central's most-watched program and perhaps the most manic thing on TV, with entire episodes created just days before they air. With a ripped-from-the-headlines approach, it's the "Law & Order" of comedy. (The first episode tackled Hurricane Katrina.) Parker and Stone last month inked a deal for three more seasons and "South Park" is now in syndication in some markets. It looks as if the world of Cartman, Stan, Kyle and the rest will continue to expand.

Cartman once described independent movies as "gay cowboys eating pudding." Now we have "Brokeback Mountain," a movie about gay cowboys. Are you guys prophets?

STONE: No, but Cartman is. [Laughs] We went to Sundance a lot in the mid-to-late '90s, and you could just tell it was going toward gay cowboydom.

It's a fast process, putting the show together.

NOTHING'S SACRED: Parker and Stone never expected their crude animated comedy to last nine years and spinoff movies.

PARKER: It is. We take a lot of time before just to come up with the broad ideas, but ... a lot of times on a Thursday, we'll sit down and go, "Hey, have you seen this Terri Schiavo thing? This is huge."

Does the process ever backfire?

STONE: I actually think that makes the show better in a weird way. It's kind of a punk-rock ethic.

What do you do to keep it fresh?

PARKER: It's so much fun, since we still do everything, you can sort of see our growth as writers. When we started this show, we knew how to do funny, outrageous stuff, but we didn't know how to write.

Is there something you're sensitive about or is everything fair game?

STONE: We have a really funny breast cancer episode coming up. [Laughs] I just think it's not contradictory to make fun of something and be sensitive about it.

Are you thinking about another movie?

PARKER: Um, no.

STONE: "Team America" almost killed us. We'd like to figure out a way to do our own movies, but not die doing them, and maybe help some other people produce their movies, like graduate to the next level because we are getting up there in age. JAKE COYLE (AP)

Juliette Lewis' rock career is going about as well as her acting career.

Juliette & the Licks: What's She Thinking?

I Yes, it's that Juliette Lewis and no, the band Juliette and the Licks hasn't overcome its reputation for vanity-project novelty rock. If a friend buys tickets ironically, go early to witness the pure-pop genius of locals Karmella's Game.

Dave Gahan, front, leads '80s synth-rockers Depeche Mode into a new age.

Let the Flowers Gloom

Depeche Mode gives its electronic-dance Goth a cyber edge

MUSIC | Over an assembly-line drumbeat and pulsing synth-bass figure, singer Dave Gahan sums up the dark glory of Depeche Mode in two lines: "How sweet life would be/If I could be free from the sinner in me."

This from a slow, uneasy tune that sets the pace and creepiness quotient for much of the Mode's latest release, "Playing the Angel" (Reprise). Falling somewhere between cyber-noir and Gothic gospel, the album successfully revisits a cool, eerie sound that probably should feel dated but doesn't.

Part of the reason for this is that Gahan and principal songwriter Martin Gore remain fixated on topics that, like black, never go out of style.

Taking on love, death and God, they mix intense human emotion with electronic accompaniments that bounce between robotic and romantic. While this disc isn't quite the world-changer the earlier one was, "Playing the Angel" offers a refresher course in suave anguish, a mysterious phone call from an old friend who's blown into town for some after-hours danger. Even when it's on the depressing side — "Lillian," for example — the album satisfies: "Pain and misery always hit the spot." KENNETH PARTRIDGE

'IDIOT' OR 'NAIVE'? Moby has premiered his "Little Idiot" clothing line, featuring his own doodles of cats, dogs, robots and other characters. "The little characters I draw are very simple, very naive, and I guess I am too in a lot of ways," Moby said.

HERE'S TO LIFE: The vocalist enjoyed worldwide success, a Grammy and a National Endowment for the Arts honor in her many decades of interpreting jazz.

Shirley Horn, Jazz Icon, Dies

The singer-pianist never strayed from her Washington roots

APPRECIATION | Shirley Horn, the jazz pianist and vocalist who got her start opening for Miles Davis and became revered as a master interpreter of American standards, has died at the age of 71, her record label said Friday.

Horn died Thursday night in her native Washington, D.C., after a long illness, according to a statement released by Verve Records.

Horn was often compared to Sarah Vaughan, Ella Fitzgerald and Carmen McRae, and considered one of the last great jazz vocalists of her era.

She started playing the piano when she was a child, and by the time she was a college student at Howard University, she had put together her first jazz trio.

Her talent drew the attention of music legend Quincy Jones, who would produce her first albums, as well as Miles Davis, who asked her to open for him at the renowned Village Vanguard in 1960.

However, after producing two albums for Mercury Records, she had creative differences with the label and left. At the same time, she had a young daughter and decided to scale back on her performances and recordings.

"I just remembered when I was a young girl and 11 and 12 and I would come from music school, my mother was there with a hot meal," she said in an interview with NPR in 2002. "I was there, and I was happy that I was."

Horn's career entered a renaissance when she signed with Verve Records in 1986. She went on to release several acclaimed albums and was featured at major jazz festivals and venues around the globe.

In her later years, she performed with artists ranging from Davis, who reunited with her for a rare appearance as a sideman on her 1991 album "You Won't Forget Me," to Wynton Marsalis.

She was nominated for multiple Grammys and won the award in 1991 for best jazz vocal performance.

Last year, Horn was honored by the National Endowment for the Arts as a jazz master.

Everything's Jake

Jake Shimabukuro redefines what the humble uke can do

MUSIC | If the word "ukulele" brings to mind hairy-eared retirees banging out "Ain't She Sweet?" Jake Shimabukuro will send you back to uke school.

The ukulele has seen three major flowerings on the mainland. Jazz-age collegians learned a few chords to court their sweethearts. Arthur Godfrey brought the '50s exotica craze home with his own line of instruments. Jim Beloff launched a popular line of songbooks in the '90s. In each case, the focus was on getting hobbyists to pick up a friendly instrument anyone can play.

Shimabukuro, a warm yet stunningly virtuosic performer headlining at the Birchmere Tuesday, isn't like that. He's all about getting the ukulele to do things nobody thought possible. While he's happy to teach novices a few strums, his own playing may well inspire you to put the uke down for a few days.

"Dragon," the 28-year-old Hawaiian's fourth solo album, extends his explorations into jazz, pop, rock and classical sounds. The bubbly "3rd Stream" unveils a percussive new picking technique, while the lilting "Touch" goes for the softer side.

You may never be able to squeeze an oddly tender dance-club adaptation of Rodrigo's "Concierto de Aranjuez" or a jaw-dropping rendition of Chick Corea's out of a tiny ax with a two-octave range, but it's a thing of beauty to see someone who can. GLENN DIXON

WALLACE & GROMIT: THE CURSE OF THE WERE-RABBIT

Television

SCRIPT, DOCTORS: Chery Hines of "Curb Your Enthusiasm" will don unflattering greens for a guest appearance on NBC's "Scrubs." Everyone's favorite long-suffering wife will play the devout Christian sister of acerbic Dr. Cox (John C. McGinley).

'Human Trafficking' takes a hard look at an appalling crime

THE ISSUES | “The Network for Women” gets serious about a major issue with the four-hour miniseries “Human Trafficking” (9 p.m., Lifetime, concludes Tuesday).

Mira Sorvino stars as a New York City cop who joins a special federal agency dedicated to cracking down on the international sex trade.

“Trafficking” follows three stories, each of them grim. A single mother from Prague is seduced and sold by a “nice guy.” A teenager from Kiev thinks she's won a modeling contest only to be forced into prostitution, and a 12-year-old American girl is snatched from her vacationing parents on the streets of Manila and forced into the sex-tourism industry.

Not for the squeamish, the four-hour film makes its point with scenes of extreme violence and abject horror, as in the opening moments when a young girl commits suicide rather than submit to her repulsive customer.

"Trafficking" is certain to help dispel the "Pretty Woman" myth of the working girl. There's no small irony in the fact that "Trafficking" star Mira Sorvino won her Oscar for playing a happy hooker in "Mighty Aphrodite." KEVIN MCDONOUGH

ON TV TONIGHT

A JURY OF HIS PIERS

VIVA BLACKPOOL (10 p.m., BBC America) follows the brash casino promoter Ripley Holden (David Morrissey) as he tries to inject glitz, glamour and gambling profits into a faded sea resort. Seedy, desperate and dangerous, Ripley must also cope with a family spinning out of control. And if the neon doesn't keep your attention, the characters on "Viva" continually burst into song and dance.

THIS MAKES US HATE THE '00S

The five-part series I LOVE THE '80S: 3D (9 p.m., VH1) adds new depth to shallow commentary about the Shoulder Pad Decade. More than 3 million special glasses have been distributed at electronic retailers. Let the eyestrain begin!

Welcome to fabulous — Blackpool?
Holden has big plans for the resort.

CULT CHOICE

Turner Classic Movies kicks off a seven-night, 36-film salute to Alfred Hitchcock, beginning with the 1973 documentary THE MEN WHO MADE THE MOVIES: ALFRED HITCHCOCK (8 p.m., TCM). KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Mental Health

Is compulsive clutter a modern ailment on par with obesity?

Karen Lowe looks lost in her own apartment. Board games and puzzles teeter over the hamster's cage. A green metal desk spills toys and papers like a jackknifed truck in what should be the dining room. Upstairs, a computer shoots wires like kudzu around her bedroom.

Lowe's Boulder, Colo., home convulses with clutter. The chaotic accumulation is more than a quirk in her otherwise orderly life as a software engineer. The mess has become a shameful secret. Worse yet, her daughter Elphey, 12, is developing the same habits.

Ashamed and seemingly paralyzed, Lowe finally hired experts. Her story offers hope to the tens of millions of Americans like her who live under the anarchy of their possessions.

“It's no accident that people have a huge weight problem in [the U.S.], and clutter is the same thing.”

PETER WALSH
ORGANIZATIONAL CONSULTANT

Hoard Mental

“People's homes are a reflection of their lives,” said Los Angeles psychologist and organizational consultant Peter Walsh. “It is no accident that people have a huge weight problem in this country, and clutter is the same thing. Homes are an orgy of consumption.”

The obesity analogy isn't a joke. While personal spending drives much of the U.S. economy, the resulting clutter from all that shopping is so pervasive that some researchers wonder if it might have a deeper, biological component, similar to overeating.

Their speculation borrows from evolutionary theory.

Modern humans developed some 100,000 years ago as hunters and gatherers living in fundamentally harsher circumstances. Today, we are surrounded by abundance, but our bodies have remained genetically programmed to eat everything in sight. Similarly, our forebears saved anything that could be materially useful because they had to make everything from scratch.

Scientists have difficulty quantifying clutter. It is a private problem that most people sweep under the rug. Psychologists estimate that 3 million Americans never throw anything out in a twisted logic of perfectionism and fear. These hoarders have a form of obsessive-compulsive disorder.

Hoarding research focuses on a region of the brain connected with decision-making, problem-solving and anticipating rewards.

At Connecticut's Hartford Hospital, patients reclined in a magnetic resonance imaging scanner, which images brain function by tracking blood flow. On a video link, psychologist David Tolin held up their junk mail and asked whether to save it or trash it. The hoarders' brains showed activity spikes in one part of the brain.

“Their brains screamed that they were making an error,” Tolin said. “So they put down the mail and clutter builds up.”

Not everyone who lives in a cluttered home is a compulsive hoarder and people who are messy might not need a brain scan. But increasingly they are seeking professional help. Lowe contracted with Aricia LaFrance, a suburban Denver psychologist and organizational consultant. The purge requires three consecutive August weekends.

Social forces contribute to clutter, too. The chief culprit: Easy money. Americans use 1.2 billion credit cards and carry an average total of $8,562 in consumer debt.

The domestic diva puts her name on an entire N.C. suburb

What could be better than waking up on Martha Stewart sheets in a Martha Stewart bed, gardening with Martha Stewart tools, and ending your day with a Martha Stewart recipe?

Why, doing it all under the tastefully gabled roof of your Martha Stewart home in a complete Martha Stewart subdivision, of course.

The domestic diva has extended her brand yet again, partnering with developer KB Home to create a New England-style neighborhood of 650 houses in Cary, N.C., an affluent Raleigh suburb.

Can the cachet of America's favorite household goddess really extend to people's most important purchase?

"I certainly hope so," Stewart said this week. "That's what KB is hoping, too — that because of the Martha Stewart name recognition for high quality and good design, that it will appeal to a lot of people, and they will come in and notice that we've paid attention to the lock on the window, the finish on the cabinet, the surface on the countertops," she said.

Martha Stewart Living Omnimedia, Inc. and KB announced their partnership earlier this month, saying they would build Twin Lakes: Homes Created with Martha Stewart. Construction is just beginning in this suburb of 100,000, with model homes set to be ready early next year.

A KB Home spokesman said the company has already gotten about 650 "expressions of interest" from potential buyers. They will be able to choose from 12 models in town-homes and single-family dwellings, ranging from 1,300 to 4,000 square feet and with prices from $150,000 to $400,000.

Three house designs are based on homes Stewart owns in Maine and New York state, and options for interior features in all models were chosen by Stewart's design team. She also advised on floor plans, including large laundry rooms, well-organized closets and space for indoor and outdoor entertaining.

While no one expects the Stewart name to make Cary or future developments planned for Georgia and Texas a magnet for Stewart devotees from across the nation, even a competitor acknowledges such tie-ins can make a difference.

Experts say the Stewart development will add a touch of distinction to less wealthy consumers who like the prestige of the Stewart name.

Mitzi Montoya-Weiss, a North Carolina State University marketing professor, lives in Cary herself and believes the suburb is the perfect market "filled with a huge bunch of conspicuous consumers." Buyers will be "the newly well-to-do crowd. They are very aware of style, fashion in general," she said.

KB Home and Cary officials say they're not worried the development will suffer now or later from anything that might tarnish Stewart's image, such as her conviction and five-month prison term for lying to authorities about a stock sale.

 Louis Verdad harks back to the '40s femme

THERE'S AN IDIOM IN SPANISH sometimes used to praise the posture and poise of a dancer who can take your breath away with a mere step: "bailar grande" or "dancing big." This phrase came to mind while watching models strut down a runway festooned with AstroTurf and cardboard cutout flowers at Louis Verdad's Spring 2006 show, held Oct. 16, the first day of L.A.'s Fashion Week.

Fedoras tilted rakishly, coral pouts fiercely pursed, Verdad's girls walked tall — and looked at least a couple of feet taller in some of the designer's splendidly cut, ultra-sassy frocks. A '40s club dress in cognac-hued silk charmeuse with notched sleeves, cinched tight with a belt adorned with an oversize flower button, had the clean, beautiful rigor of an Art Deco high-rise. The entire collection brought into sharper focus a vision that the Mexican American designer has been perfecting for a couple of years — an elegant, feminine look with a bit of an edge, which boils down stylistic cues from the '40s and '50s to their most theatrical essences.

Verdad unveiled a selection of silk jersey and cotton summer dresses in delightful sherbet hues — apricot, tangerine, pistachio green and coral. A simple sweetheart dress in soft, smooth lilac silk registered memorably as a perfect balancing act between color, cut and fabric.

Verdad managed to draw unexpected smiles with an adorable micro jacket worn like a bolero on top of a white stretch poplin blouse, and with whimsical details like oversize front pockets sewn onto a cotton beach dress — perhaps designed to accommodate the teacup-sized Pomeranians, Chihuahuas and Terriers that accompanied some of the models down the catwalk.

What Verdad does is a classically chic silhouette based on retro-glam archetypes like Raymond Chandler's gallery of femme fatales and sharp-witted, smart-mouthed office girls. His work has sometimes drawn criticism for being seemingly stuck in a rut.

Like Marc Jacobs, another retro-minded designer, Verdad is a strong stylist who knows how to cut a blouse and tailor a suit, and how to make a dress that clings exactly in the right places. Sunday he made a strong case that he deserves Jacobs' commercial success, and maybe even a similar place in the pop culture lexicon. SORINA DIACONESCU

Instant (Almost) W.C.

Was "install bathroom" on your to-do list this weekend? Probably not. But with the SANIFLO TOILET SYSTEM, you can install one in as little as half a day. The toilet uses a macerator (the box behind the toilet above), in which a spinning blade liquefies waste before sending it to the sewer. You can add a Sani toilet anywhere with a water supply and an electrical outlet; because the macerated waste isn't solid, it can move through small pipework — no need for a floor drain. The new SANIGRID is a macerator only, allowing you to attach any toilet you want. SeesaniFlo.com for dealers. KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY (EXPRESS)

Channel Surfing

Post TV columnist LISA DE MORAES was online Friday, dishing on a few stars and offering up her own idea for a reality show | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

If you were to pitch a TV show to network execs, what would it be?

That's easy. A reality series called "Celebrities You Thought Were Dead But Aren't." It would be a half-hour show, packaged with another half-hour reality series: "Celebrity Autopsy." Just think of the sweeps cross-over episode possibilities!

Rosie O'Donnell at "The Actor's Studio"! Has April Fool's come earlier? Have they run out of semi-decent actors?

They put someone else on the other day who has never acted. I wish I could remember who it was. Let's face it, this show is not about acting, or actors, it's about Lipton, America's Greatest Living Gasbag.

Where do you see Fred Savage in 10 years?

On "Inside the Actors Studio."

Geena Davis — I used to find her very attractive. Is it just me or has she become less sexy because she's playing a politician or is it the trite words she is forced to speak?

You should have seen her at the ABC party during the summer press tour. She is definitely still extremely sexy and attractive. Not sure why they turned her into a frump for the show but, I cannot say it often enough, with [Steven] Bochco now in charge, that will (hopefully) change.

I had to laugh at Brent Bozell saying "Ghost Whisperer" has only mild sexual content. Has he not seen how they dress Jennifer Love Hewitt? For that matter, has he not seen Jennifer Love Hewitt?

You're suggesting that Jennifer Love Hewitt is the very personification of "sexual content"? How dare you, sir/ms! Jennifer Love Hewitt is one of our country's most accomplished thespians. Did you not see her in the title role in "Anna Karenina" on Lifetime? "Madame Bovary" on E! Entertainment? She stole the show in "Crime and Punishment" on Game Show Network.

Metro's 'Gentlemaniacs'

I AM A REGULAR METRO RIDER. Most of us dutifully line up on either side of the door of a train to allow those who want to exit to get out first. I frequently find myself behind what I call a "Gentlemaniac." This is someone I am sure is a really nice guy, who nevertheless blocks me (a female) from entering the train and getting a seat, while he lets every female in his line of sight on the other side of the door enter before him (and me). I think it would be better for each side to alternate. People from other countries, however, have told me that their custom is to have people entering the train to line up on their right, and people exiting to line up on their right. This allows entering and exiting to take place at the same time.

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You want to be left to tend to your business in a quiet, methodical manner, but someone may be trying to pull you away from your work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You'll enjoy taking a good look at your own behavior today: You'll see what others are so taken with and why so many doors are open to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You may be restless today; try to pin yourself down to at least one endeavor that can yield a tangible result.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Any difficulty you have today will be a result of mixed messages; you can solve the problem by taking the initiative.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) The more you do to try to help out today, the more you may find that you are actually in the way. Let those in control call all the shots.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The need to accomplish something unusual today will help you overcome certain fears. Now the question is, can you put them aside forever?

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're going to want to be as unobtrusive as possible today, especially when dealing with people who are engaged in very serious business.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You won't stop doing what you are doing until you have reached the goal you set for yourself long ago. Today may finally be that day.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This is a good day to make changes in a personal system of some sort that has proved inefficient. Experiment with other strategies and tactics.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Try as you might to get along with someone who is nominal in charge, you may find that it is impossible. Stay calm; be patient and friendly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You are sure of yourself, but avoid coming across as cocky or aggressive. Play it cool in the evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You may be far more interested in the unusual, the mysterious, the unexplained and even the occult today. Explore, but do it carefully.

ENDLESS He Just Doesn't Feel Like Tom When He's Not in Court

A Los Angeles judge wants the city attorney's office to show why TOM SIZEMORE's conviction for beating former girlfriend, Hollywood madam Heidi Fleiss, should not be thrown out, said the actor's attorneys. The actor has appealed his conviction, arguing that a photograph of Fleiss with facial bruises may have been fabricated. (AP)

NEWBORN BABIES SPSF Looks Like Wrinkly Potato, Photos Reveal

BRITNEY SPEARS threatened to take legal action after pictures of her new baby, Sean Preston Spears Federline, popped up online, apparently stolen from a private photo shoot. Spears and her husband, Kevin Federline, recently made their first public appearance since the infant was born, but there have been no clear images of the baby until now. (AP)

CELINE DION is planning to have a second child after her contract with Caesar's Palace ends in 2007. The singer, 37, said she plans to begin in vitro fertilization treatments at a New York clinic after finishing the Vegas gig. "I'm approaching 40 years old, and I have to tend to that," Dion told a French magazine. "This frozen embryo that is in New York is my child waiting to be brought to life." Dion said she has no intention of giving up singing, but also has other interests. "I would love to make a film," said Dion. "I want an Oscar!" (AP)

THIS IS NOT A JOKE He Hacked the Cake to Pieces With His Machete

Alumni of the "Friday the 13th" horror-flick series gathered at Universal Studios on Saturday to toast the 25th anniversary of JASON VOORHEES, the hockey mask-wearing, machete-wielding, mass-murdering central character of the 11 low-budget films. The Saturday night gathering also marked the unveiling of the coffee-table book "Crystal Lake Memories: The Complete History of Friday the 13th." An actor in a Jason costume was treated to "Happy Birthday" sung by many of the performers who'd played Jason's victims. He then whipped out his machete and hacked the cake to pieces. (AP)

If only all celebrities would violently destroy their birthday cakes.

OUTRAGE Idaho Celebrities Rally Against Bill, Storm D.C.

To singer and Idaho resident CAROLE KING, a bill in Congress that aims to create more protected wilderness in Idaho doesn't go far enough. This week, she will head to Washington, D.C., to lobby against the legislation sponsored by Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho. The 63-year-old Rock and Roll Hall of Famer wants to protect a much vaster swath of the Northern Rockies. (AP)
